The trees are empty for the winter; the school is empty for the day. The late buses leave; the last dented Volvo pulls slowly past Gunston. The final footsteps echo on the sidewalk as they head toward Quander Road.

Nobody's here.

But the ground's as hard as concrete under cafeteria carpeting, and what little grass there is waves bravely from the icy mud.

Nobody sees the scrawny maple tree behind the school — naked and shivering as if it had hourly updates on the wind chill factor. Its branches and the sky make a frozen filagree, and when the air slides through it just so, it whistles softly in the cold. It's the only sound there is on this Groveton winter afternoon, but there's nobody around to hear it.

Nobody's ever around for Groveton winter afternoons. It gets dark too quickly to really do anything, after all. And it's always so cold.

Looking at empty trees.

Jack L. Hiller

Hanging in the sky, the sun sinks behind the western edge. It's night here now.
It's morning somewhere else. When one day is over, another day takes its place.
When one thing is finished, another begins. Maybe that's important.
Then again, maybe it's not.
We are so small in comparison to the sun, the sky, the universe. We really don't mean much at all.
Then again, maybe we do.

ALL THE WAY
TO STATE

The girls hockey team, after two undefeated seasons, won the state championship this past fall. The first title the team won was in 1976 when they became the Gunston District Field Hockey Champions. This year they have won three titles; Gunston District Field Hockey Champions, Northern Regional Field Hockey Champions, and The State Field Hockey Champions. This is the first year that state competition was held in Field Hockey. Our congratulations to the team.

A really outstanding, memorable teacher can have a great effect on the directions and goals of a student's life. Such a teacher can be many things. One may have a deep, comprehensive knowledge of her subject. Another may have the ability of bringing out hidden talents in her students. Still another may possess the gift of eliciting real enthusiasm for learning.

Dorthie Kogelman has brought all these talents to the many hundreds of students who have passed through her hands in her twenty years at Groveton. Talking to her, it becomes increasingly clear that she is a uniquely committed, caring human being, as well as a dedicated professional.

In Mrs. K's reminiscences, names of past productions and former students come up again and again. Yet she refuses to highlight any as special or more important in any way. Each production, each group of students, occupies all her energy and attention at a given time. She involves herself totally in the project at hand, bringing amazing amounts of vitality and drive to all her efforts on the stage and in the curriculum. She is unremittingly disciplined, and, by requiring the same discipline of her students, she produces the aura of professionalism for which Groveton productions are noted.

Theatre is very much a group process. One of Mrs. K's greatest gifts is her ability to inspire her students with a sense of loyalty and commitment to the production company. "The show must go on" does not begin to express the solidarity of purpose that exists backstage. Whatever one's feelings toward a co-worker, it is an unwritten law that the esprit de corps of the company and the show as a whole are more important than any one actor or actress.

A wonderful example of Mrs. K's active participation in the group process was this fall's Godspell. "I'm aglow with what happened in Godspell," says Mrs. K., referring to the strong company feelings and student creativity in that production. "The response has been overwhelming." But Godspell is only one in a long line of distinguished high school theatre works directed by Dorthie Kogelman here at Groveton. Significantly, she does not see these as her own successes; she says that she feels "priveliged" to have worked with such talented people: "Achievement is within each person!"

Mrs. K is able to infect her students with an enthusiasm and a respect for their work. She and her actors, technicians, and production staff often work from 2:30 to 11:00 at night to put together a Groveton production. She treats her students as adults and professionals. In return, she expects adult, professional behavior from them.

Dorthie Kogelman has been at Groveton for twenty years. "But the moment is the great thing," she says, "Life changes, society changes." What makes Mrs. K. special, though, is her ability to show that she is interested in each person she deals with. It is this quality that has been such an influence in so many students' lives. She is a unique and dynamic lady.

She cares.

Laurie Hirschfeld

You can always tell who the drama people are. They:
a. enunciate better than most of us,
b. and speak reverently of Dorthie Kogelman.

Now, I have never met Dorthie Kogelman. In ninth grade, when all those first year drama students came back with glowing reports of their classes and D.K., I didn't know what they were talking about. "Decay?" I thought, "What about decay?" I am singularly unqualified to write about this lady. But here goes.

Drama is illusion. It is pretending, it is fakery. Its whole thrust is to make things appear what they are not. Behind all this fakery, though, is a formidable dose of reality.

Her name is Mrs. K.

Though she refuses to take credit for the success of Grovetons drama department, Dorthie Kogelman has certainly had something to do with it. She is, in fact, the driving force behind it. She is a tiny woman with enormous energy.

Groveton
Community
High
School
The place
LANDSCAPE PLA
lass

This school gets no respect.

We are something of a joke in Area I; if Fort Hunt was an editorial in Stars and Stripes, if Mount Vernon was a slick coffee table book on a slick suburban coffee table, then Groveton would be the National Equirer. We'd be True Confessions and Marvel Comics all rolled into one. We'd be the kind of school your blue haired aunt would read under the dryer at the beauty parlor.

People make fun of us.

They call us Grits, though few of us are of that persuasion. They laugh at our football team; they paint their schools' initials over our tiger paws. Even our nice new building isn't safe — they sneer at its lack of windows. They call us a Lorton with cheerleaders.

People are scared of us.

They say we have riots instead of pep rallies. They think we steal hubcaps for fun and profit. They say we wear funny clothes, that we act strange. They say, in eyebrow lifted intimations, that Groveton is Different.

They're right.

Attending Groveton is a peculiar privilege. It does have its rewards. Going to Groveton means having friends whose houses aren't identical to your own, friends who aren't identical to you.

If it's not a pretty school, it's not as ugly as it was on Popkins Lane, either. Beauty isn't conducive to study, anyway. (And Groveton does too have windows. They line the library; you can stretch out on a bench in front of one and watch the whole day lurch by, if you want to.)

If our football team wasn't so hot this year, our basketball team was better than most. And our field hockey team was the best in Virginia.

No, Groveton doesn't get much respect. We've gone without it so long, we probably wouldn't know it if they dished it up and served it for lunch in Quander Right. Still, we are not particularly upset about the notoriety of our lack of notoriety.

I have a gray hair.

I didn't have it when I got here.

Groveton gave it to me.

I first noticed it in eleventh grade, in fourth period English. Dionne DeNio saw it and pulled it out of my head. I was sort of sorry when she did that; it was interesting, having a gray hair. It was like having six toes on one foot or being double jointed. When the conversation started to lag, you could point to your head and say, "Look!" I never did do that, though. Conversation was never in such dire straits. Anyway, after about a week, another gray hair appeared, and I have had it ever since. Silver threads among the brown, as it were.

It was the mornings. I think, that did it. If I have to, I can go from deepest sleep to first period in twenty-one minutes. If I were to skip Ann Landers, I could probably do it in eighteen-five. In any case, I never really wake up until third period, by which time I am so bored that I fall asleep all over again. I average about twelve lucid minutes a day. And those are during lunch.

Then again, it might have been the skipping, Now, I do not want to give anyone the impression that I spend an unreasonable amount of time not going to class. Still, anyone with an armful of books and a purposeful look in his eye can avoid the administration looking for people avoiding school.

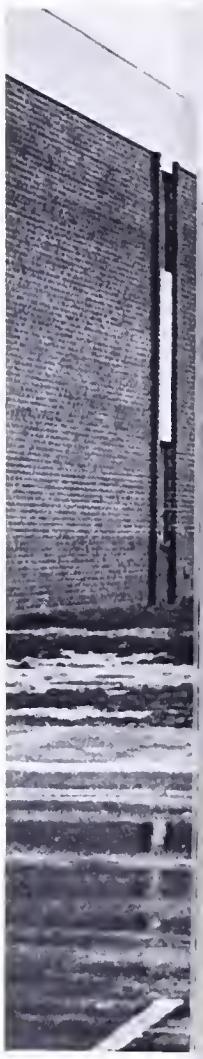
I might have gotten my gray hair walking to school. I usually try to drive, but a lot of times when school is starting, my car is not. In the winter, Groveton's back field is a crunchy tundra, and if there's no snow, there's mud. It oozes up into the back of my clogs and my socks slosh for the rest of the day. It's miserable.

Or, homework may have done it. Anytime a teacher prefaces an assignment with, "I know you have other classes to worry about, but . . . ," you know you are in trouble. The relationship between what I do and what is due is directly proportional to what is on television that night. And even reruns of I Dream of Jeannie will beat out trigonometry, every time.

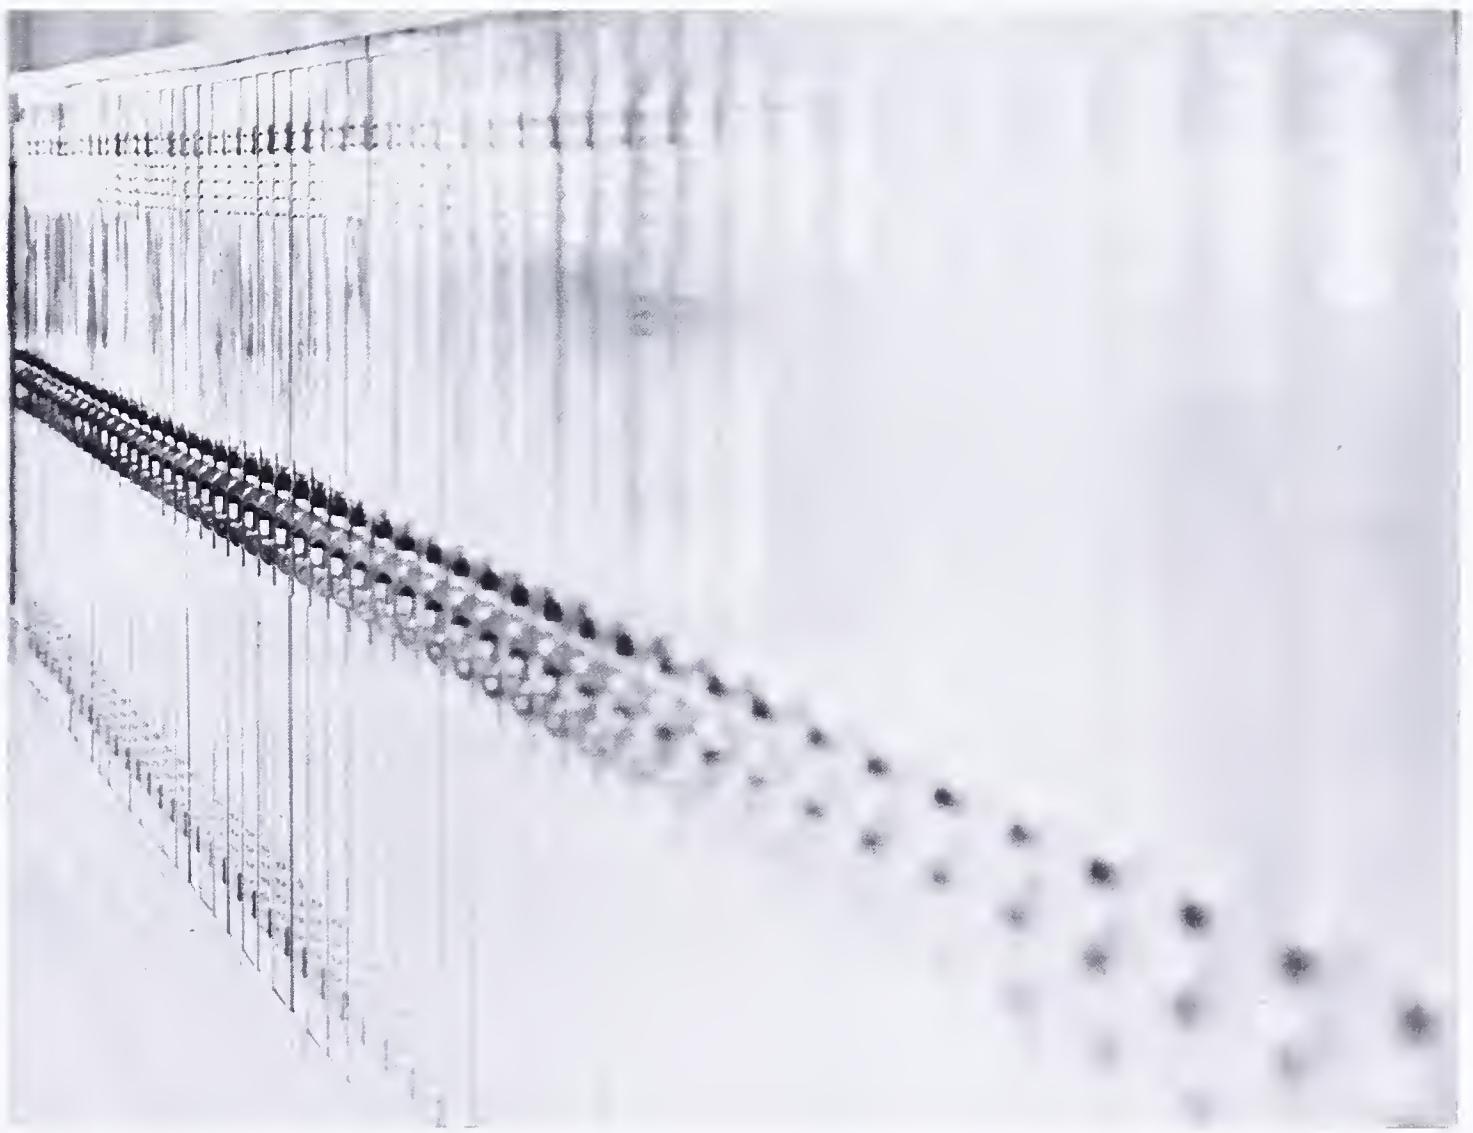
I have been in the senior slump since the middle of my sophomore year. I never thought I'd make it through the twelfth grade. I do think that molar mass is how much your teeth weigh, and that the Diet of Worms would give a person indigestion, but I'm not dumb.

It's just that I have this gray hair.

Eighteen is too young to feel old.



WE WILL W WI! RUSH YOU
NO PARKING



We were talking the other day about school, and why we go there, and how we get out of going there, and where we would go and what we would do when we didn't have to go there (and get out of going there) anymore.

And we wondered, what is to become of us?

Graduation from Groveton is viewed with happiness and relief, but with a good measure of fear, too. We are nervous. Our futures are breathing down our necks, and we suspect they have halitosis.

Most of us will . . .
go to college and
get jobs, but . . .
Some of us will . . .
host talkshows,
drink wine out of bottles in paper bags,
lose our hair,
gain confidence,
sell ginseng on street corners,
move to South Dakota,
sleep late,
dance for a living,
have triplets,
marry well and live in Monaco,
hotwire hearses,
vote Republican,
go fishing,
die young
bake pretzels,
cut grass,
play Scrabble,
sell vacuum cleaners,
use vacuum cleaners,
take shorthand,
buy ostentatious things and leave them lying
around,
change haircolors,
burn our bridges,
play bingo every other Saturday night,
take liberties,
wash windows,
write dirty books,
attract magnates,
count our chickens before they are hatched,
ski the Andes,
chew tobacco,
meet Debby Boone but forget who she was,
sail around the world,
get ulcers,
eat quiche,
name our sons Elvis,
develop ring around the collar,
read four newspapers a day,
smoke too much,
deny things we know to be true,
memorize Shakespeare,
help ourselves,
subvert the government,
design doggie sweaters,
cultivate houseplants,
cry over spilt milk,
find life on Mars,
call our best friends collect from France and
talk for an hour,
bet the horse races,
lead Brownie troops,
beg forgiveness,
remember Groveton High School,
and smile.
